Where can I go for medical care?

Primary Care/Community Health Center

When: If you are seeking care for any non-immediate issues, including prevention, wellness, and treatment for common illnesses, please contact your primary care clinic or a community health center.

Common conditions that can be treated at a primary care facility or community health center:

- ▶ Annual physicals
- ▶ Care for minor symptoms, such as sore throat, cough, or nasal congestion
- ▶ Dental services (available at select locations)
- ▶ Laboratory testing, such as blood or urine tests
- ▶ Medication management
- ▶ Physicals for school, sports, camp, etc.
- ▶ Preventive care visits
- ▶ Referral to a specialist
- ▶ Screening and treatment for non-urgent conditions, long term health issues, such as managing high cholesterol, high blood pressure or diabetes
- ▶ Treatment for common illnesses such as colds, the flu, or urinary tract infections (UTIs)
- ▶ Treatment of some injuries, such as minor cuts or burns
- ▶ Vaccinations

Urgent Care

When: If you have a non-life-threatening illness or injury that requires immediate same-day care, please go to a local urgent care center.

Common conditions that can be treated at an urgent care facility or community health center:

- ▶ Back or muscle pain
- ▶ Cuts and minor burns
- ▶ Diarrhea
- ▶ Eye irritation and redness
- ▶ Earache
- ▶ Fever and colds
- ▶ Flu
- ▶ Dehydration
- ▶ Infections
- ▶ Mild asthma attacks
- ▶ Skin conditions
- ▶ Sprains or joint pain
- ▶ Upper respiratory infection (such as bronchitis)
- ▶ Urinary tract infections
- ▶ Vomiting and nausea
- ▶ Strep throat

Emergency Care

When: If you have a serious or potentially life-threatening illness or injury, go to the nearest emergency room or call 9-1-1. Emergency care is available 24/7.

Common conditions that can be treated at an emergency department:

- ▶ Broken bones
- ▶ Chest pain or pressure
- ▶ Coughing or vomiting blood
- ▶ Difficulty breathing / shortness of breath
- ▶ Fainting, dizziness, or loss of consciousness
- ▶ Head or neck injuries
- ▶ Heart attack symptoms
- ▶ Pneumonia

Community Health Centers

A community health center, also known as a Federally Qualified Health Center (FQHC), is a type of clinic that's community-directed and supported by federal funding. They're aimed at serving communities that may not have access to affordable healthcare and will adjust the costs of services based on an individual's ability to pay. Community health centers provide comprehensive primary care in addition to other services such as mental healthcare, dental care, pharmacies, and treatment or counseling for substance use disorders.

Primary Care

One of the most popular types of clinics are those that focus on primary care. Primary care clinics cover a wide range of routine and preventive healthcare services. The doctors you'll see at a primary care clinic practice general medicine in their field. This can include family medicine, internal medicine, or pediatrics. Additionally, some primary care clinics may offer services at low cost or no cost. These clinics may be referred to as free or charitable clinics. Community health centers or Federally Qualified Health Centers offer these same services.

Urgent Care

Urgent care centers can be utilized for urgent medical conditions, illnesses, or injuries that are not considered life-threatening emergencies, but still require same-day care within 24 hours. Urgent care centers offer fast, convenient access to medical care. An urgent care center is not a substitute for primary care but is a great resource when you need care and cannot schedule with your primary care physician urgently.

Emergency Care

The emergency room (ER) is a department in a hospital or medical center. Unlike a doctor's office, you do not need an appointment, but that means many people may need treatment at the same time. In that case, the most urgent problems are treated first. If you feel that your condition has changed while you are waiting, let the triage nurse know. ER's work best when they are used for truly life-threatening emergencies. If you have a serious or potentially life-threatening illness or injury, go to the nearest ER or call 9-1-1.
